

A Word in Your Ear 2009: Conference Report

Derek France, Department of Geography, University of Chester

This one-day conference focussed on the relatively new and important area of practice centred on 'Audio Feedback' and was held at Sheffield Hallam University in December 2009. Over 110 delegates attended the event from 47 HEIs, including Institutions in the USA and Malaya.

The Keynote address by Bob Rotheram of Leeds Metropolitan University, who led the JISC-funded "Sounds Good" project, used his experiences to reflect on the project and highlight the main findings, practice tips and limitations of audio feedback.

The programme was divided into three sessions and contributions were made by academics, students, educational developers and learning technologists through (16) short papers, (12) posters, (3) workshops, a student panel and (3) Challenge Circle discussion groups.

The Conference website <http://research.shu.ac.uk/lti/awordinyourear2009/> (accessed 21 June 2010) provides access to a range of resources including the conference proceedings and a series of downloadable podcasts which were recorded during a number of the conference sessions, workshops and discussions held.
